

“Backwards” Course Design Worksheet: “Backwards” course design always begins with learning outcomes: it is important to know what students should learn before designing the other components. Educational theorists debate which step goes next, planning learning activities or determining assessments. Figure out which works best for you.

Course Learning Outcome	What learning activities will support this outcome?	How will students demonstrate that they’ve achieved this outcome?

